Live to Be 100 by Early Training

"Have the right kind of ancestors and the right kind of training from birth to five years of age, if you wish to live to be 100."

Dr. Eugene R. Kelley

This is the prescription of Dr. Eugene R. Kelley of the State Department of Health. The Boston American today prints the second in a series of four interviews with leading health authorities on the question of longevity. "It is important to be keen at the start of life if you wish to live to be 100," he said. "Many a youngster inherits his life when young, then inherits illness and premature decay or overwork in later life UP TO PARENTS."

Boston Woman Lives on $450 a Year

The spectre of the high cost of living has no terrors for one little Boston woman. She has successfully solved the problem of making an income of $450 a year meet all her needs, giving her food, shelter, clothes, and some amusements. And she has money left over to lend a helping hand to church and charity.

The story of how she has done this for some years can be told by Mrs. J. Agnes Devine, who is a family physician in a Boston street. Mrs. Devine has been living on $450 a year for some years. She has successfully solved the problem of making an income of $450 a year meet all her needs, giving her food, shelter, clothes, and some amusements. And she has money left over to lend a helping hand to church and charity.

THIRTEEN BABY PILGRIMS arrive from England to become real Americans. They are to be adopted into American homes. The picture shows Mrs. Julian V. Allen of the National Adoption Committee in London for the Children Welfare Federation holding one of the youngsters.

ANOTHER WOMAN CHAMPION. It's Miss Dorothy Becker, who at the recent meet in Alameda, Calif., proved her prowess as a base-stroke swimmer. The photo shows her as she looked after finishing that race.

HERE HE IS. No need to introduce Tris Speaker, manager and centerfielder of the Cleveland Indians, to the fandom of the United States. His face is as well known as his record to hundreds of thousands of men and women followers of the great national game. He's been wearing a baseball uniform for a good many seasons now, but he's still going strong.

POST AND WAR MAKER. Olin Miller, author and editor, who led the movement in Europe against the signing of the Allies giving their franchise to the Allies against the Germans. Recently, after leaving France, he returned to the United States for the fight of the French.

HE HAS THE STRONGEST SET OF TEETH in Uncle Sam's Navy. He's sailor Jim White, and he gave Broadway, New York, a real thrill the other day when he hitched up a string of autos loaded with passengers and hauled them a full block by a rope gripped in his teeth. The photo shows him at the trick.

GEN. NELSON A. MILES, famous American leader, reviews the 16th National Guard of New York, that State's famous regiment of colored fighters, in Central park. The general is presenting the regiment with a flag, gift of the Legion.

FAIR COLLEGE ATHLETES COMPETE. Here's Miss Janet Snow of the Oakman School making a high jump at the meet in which the women students of six eastern colleges and schools contested for premiere honors. The meet was held at the Mamaroneck Field and some of the cracks among the college girls were present.

SWIM AND GROW STRONG. This is the advice given by Miss Ruth Solfield, who is sixteen-year-old girl, for the physical development of a girl four years older and the sprits of a child of eight. She was picked as the Health Girl of her graduating class at the Girls' High School, Brooklyn, N. Y., as well as the most nearly perfect physical specimen of 160 girls.

Fresh From Paris

PARIS are the tailors' shops on the smart boulevards and at the popular fashionable places of Paris this season—suits as to style, color and fabric. The instance, a coat may reach to a little above the knee, or it may extend to within a few inches of the hair edge, or again, it may gracefully drape about any one of the lengths between. A skirt, moreover, may be exceedingly plain or very much elaborate. As to fabric, serge, broadcloth, kasha and velours de laine are much used, and in the more formal mode, one uses champagne, taffeta, crepe and even heavy corded silk. And the latter may be as rich as black, grey, salt and pepper, blue or tobacco brown, or as frivolous as red, orange, buttercup yellow or emerald green can make it.

Both Decol and Martial et Armand use to good effect the coat-length shown in the models above, with the skirt effect at the edge of the skirt and the skirt little vest, both so becoming. Simple elegance in Paris seems to be wearing trousers of this sort. It is a picture makes the model at the left, and the little vest of tulle striped in two shades of grey, a hat of grey canvas crepe trimmed with grey velvet bow, a grey lace hat and grey-trimmed garters carry out the color scheme admirably.

A similar model of the dress in two shades of grey, adorned with a thread of lavender, varies its front by fastening with two buttons and a plain white plait for the little vest that ends in two points. The skirt is pleated at the way around, and the grey feathered toque pictured is the last note in Parisian millinery.

BOSTON AMERICAN COOK BOOK

Rice Pudding
One square chocolate, 2 cups milk, 1 cup sugar (coffee cup), 1½ cups cooked rice, ½ level teaspoon salt, 3 eggs, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Melt chocolate, add milk and sugar. When blended mix with rice and salt in a pudding dish. Beat the eggs slightly and stir carefully into the pudding. Flavor with vanilla and bake in a slow oven until the custard is set. Serve with cream.

Tea Cakes
One cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 small tablespoon shortening, 1 cup cold water, 1 pint of lemon (grated), 2 cups pastry flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder. If desired use 1 cup small curd curd washed and floured. Bake in muffin tins 25 to 30 minutes.

One dollar will be paid for each recipe printed. Cut them out from day to day and you will have a really practical cook book.

Public Regulation of Private Corporations a Farce

So the Massachusetts Senate has refused to give our Public Utilities Department the right to summon witnesses and to put them under oath in those important cases which our Public Utilities Department is called on to try, in which the great public service corporations are on the one side and the people are on the other, and in which the only issue is the charge which the public service companies make for the service they are rendering and the rates they charge.

Could anything better illustrate the contention which the Boston American has made for years, that regulation of these public service corporations is a farce, and was never intended to be more than a farce, than this refusal of the Senate? Yet under these circumstances the right to summon witnesses and to punish them if they refuse to testify is denied to the body which has the right to make such cases, which involve scores of millions of dollars to the public, when a public utility case is a twenty dollar case, and our Public Utilities Department is the investigation of whether a judge of a boxing match decided fairly, is given the power to summon witnesses and to put them under oath. In citing the powers of the district court and of the Boxing Commission, we do not wish to imply that they ought not to have these powers. Indeed, they ought to have them.

But think of denying this power to the public body which is charged with the duty of regulating our great public service corporations and of hearing the long trial, far longer, more elaborate and more expensive trial than occur in any of our courts. Isn't public regulation a substitute for public ownership and operation of these public utilities an insulting farce?

Senate Should Be Eager to Probe Newberry Case

Henry Ford has asked the Senate to begin the hearings on the charges that Senator Newberry of Michigan bought the election.

Mr. Ford says that he doesn't care anything about the office of Senator Newberry but that as an American citizen he does care about the dignity of the Senate and about the impression which the country will receive, if the Newberry case is not investigated, that the seats in the Senate are for sale to the highest bidder.

Can the gentlemen in the Senate who are trying to prevent this investigation deny the truth of Mr. Ford's statement that the Senate does not make a thorough and impartial investigation of these charges, which a judge and jury sustained, then the public will believe that the seats in the United States Senate are purchasable and that the dignity and influence of the Senate, and, perhaps, even its constitutional powers, may suffer as a consequence.

It ought not to need the urging of Mr. Ford to make the Senate hold this investigation. The Senate ought to be more eager than any other body or any other man to hold it. Self-respect and dignity, and appreciation of the necessity for self-preservation by the public ought to make the Senate hold this investigation if nearly everybody in the country opposed it.

President's Good Idea

WILL AMERICAN WORKERS WORKING AND AMERICAN MONEY AT HOME.

This country will thank President Harding for another wise decision to keep American money working in the United States. He intends to stop the process of flooding this country with foreign loans that make it hard for American industrialists to get credit except at exorbitant interest rates, and thus check employment of American labor.

The process will not be difficult. By enforcing laws against lotteries and games the President will automatically choke off foreign loans that are exhausting American credits needed by American merchants and American workers.

The foreign Government bond that has regular "drawings" and pays a large cash bonus to the "lucky winner" is a lottery. The President's intention to keep American capital working in America, transformed into reality by his assistants, will do more than anything else could do to give work to the unemployed in this country, and to encourage American business men in new enterprises.

A ruling to this effect: No sale of any foreign lottery bonds or of any foreign bonds bearing more than 6 per cent. interest in the United States.

That would solve the foreign loan problem. The President's intention to keep American capital working in America, transformed into reality by his assistants, will do more than anything else could do to give work to the unemployed in this country, and to encourage American business men in new enterprises.

More News About League

Harvey Made No Mistake

The New York Times reports that Mr. Harvey got excited and threw the League of Nations overboard more violently and completely than President Harding desired.

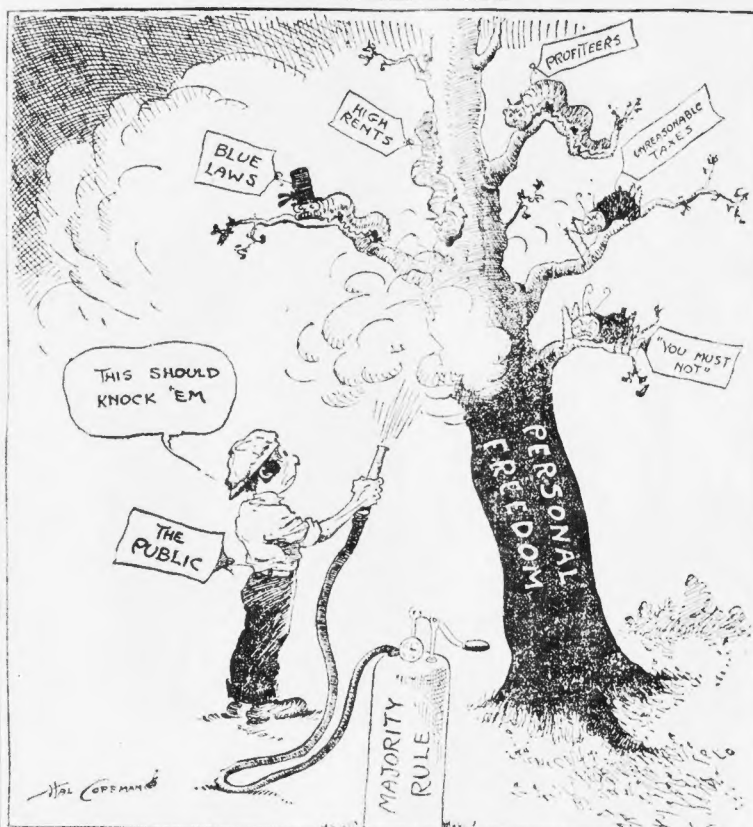

That is not likely, for Harvey likes his job, and President Harding would not stand such fooling. In any case, we learn from the Silesian situation that the League of Nations is a preposterous joke. For France, on the first division—the Silesian case—that does not suit her declares that a majority vote in the Supreme Council means nothing and the vote must be UNANIMOUS.

This means that nothing can be done unless EACH individual with power gets EVERYTHING that individual wants, and that is nonsense.

Fresh news comes from the Silesian situation. There is great wealth in Silesia, and where there is wealth, and covetousness, you are not to have war. A League of Nations allowed the Silesians to decide by vote on Polish or German nationality. Some decided for Germany; the Poles have invaded and temporarily conquered them. France, followed by a party that requires weapons and if possible destruction of Germany, supports Poland. England, for her own reasons and because she is interested in international stability, supports Germany. You will probably see trouble there.

Three Souls

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

THREE Souls there were that reached the Heavenly Gate,
And gained permission of the Guard to wait.
Barred from the bliss of Paradise by sin,
Brought on their journey, comrades, to this goal.
"We loved one woman (thus their story ran).
We lost her, for she chose another man.
So great our love, it brought us to this door.
We only ask to see her face once more.
Then we will go to realms where we belong,
And pay our penalty for doing wrong."

"And were those friends on earth?" (The guard spoke thus.)
"Nay, we were fools; but Death made friends of us.
The dominating thought within each Soul
Brought us together, comrades, to this goal.
To see her face, and in its radiance bask
For one great moment—that is all we ask.
And, having seen her, we must journey back.
The path we came—a hard and dangerous track."
"Wait, then," the Angel said, "beside me here,
But do not strive within God's gate to peer
Nor converse hold with Spirits clothed in light.
Who pass this way: thus hast not earned the right."

They waited year on year. Then, like a flame,
News of the woman's death from earth-land came.
The eager lovers scanned with hungry eyes
Each Soul that passed the Gates of Paradise.
The well-beloved face in vain they sought.
Until one day, the Guardian Angel brought
A message to them, "She has gone," he said.
Down to the lower regions of the dead.
Her chosen mate went first; so great her love
She has resigned the joys that wait above
To dwell with him, until perchance some day,
Absolved from sin, he seeks the Better Way."

Silent, the lovers trembled. The pining guard
Said: "They (while his hand the door unbarred).
Here waits for thee no darker grief or woe;
Enter the gates, and all God's glories know.
Be ready for so great a bliss.
The desired time are by each mortal lost.
Lies yonder, when the Threshold has been crossed,
And thou shalt find within that Sacred Place
The shining wonder of her worshipped face.
That is past is but a troubled dream.
Go forward now and claim the Fate Supreme."

Then clothed like Angels, fitting their estate,
Three souls went singing, singing through God's Gate.

every child's education to learn to swim.
It would be well for every child
to have a swimming pool.
Swimming lessons should be compulsory.
Not many who can swim learn to swim, and this is a pity.
The water, but compare

If a child is afraid to go into the water, it is the mother's fault.
Instruction in a tank, under care of a person who will torture the child right in a way to cause that fear to disappear.
Children who become frightened to the water should not be compelled to swim, but swim high, nor should the child be told to be proud and paddle.
One frightened it is almost impossible to conquer, and the fear of getting up and letting the feet of the ground becomes unbearable.
It takes some time to teach a child to navigate in the water, but patience and understanding will win, and parents should find it a duty they owe to their children to teach them as well as possible by teaching them to swim
as early as age is possible.

STAR SEEN PLOWING THROUGH NEBULA

By Garrett P. Serviss.

A STERIOR being visiting the earth to see what little men are worth would probably not have paid much attention to what we generally regard as our greatest achievements and our "biggest men," but would be much impressed at first sight of an astronomer, sitting in a dark room, and trying to figure out the meaning of things many trillions of miles away, of whose existence he has only learned through the aid of the telescope.
